John Hays Hammond, Expected Today, to Be the Recipient of Numerous Courtesies.

LONDON. June 3.-The usual dignity and stateliness of the British capital's public buildings, principal parks and streets are being sacrificed to the demands of coronation visitors and sightseers. The whole neighborhood of parliament, including the yards of Westminster Abbey and the parliament buildings, is covered with huge, unsightly wooden stands most of the way from Trafalgar Square to the abbey. The chief government offices are almost hidden in the same unattractive fashion. St. James Park, near Buckingham Palace, is similarly covered, as well as the principal streets through which the procession

Even the churchyards present a double ow of stands, and the houses and clubs on St. James street, Piccadilly, are fronted with stands. The big Rothschild house near the entrance to Hyde Park is half concealed by a wooden structure, and Hyde Park is being transformed into a camp for the troops. The southwestern section, opposite the fashionable quarter, is already filled with tents and John Hays Hammond, the special ambassador to represent the United States, who is due here tomorrow, will be among he first special ambassadors to arrive. Like the others, he comes at present quite unofficially, as he does not assume his functions until June 19, when he will be officially welcomed by the king. Mr. Hammond's plans during the interval are not known, but he probably will make trips in the country and possibly

On his arrival here members of the American embassy will meet him at the station. Many entertainments have already been arranged in his honor. Ambassador and Mrs. Reid will give a big dinner after the coronation, to which many diplomats and distinguished personages have been invited. The Pilgrims Society also will give a dinner in honor of Special Ambassador Hammond June 28, at which A. J. Balfour, the former premier, will preside.

Not only have clients complained of the delays and costs, but lawyers themselves fret at the insurmountable delays. Another objection has been that the rules were unnecessarily complicated. President Taft is known to be interested

PARIS, June 3.-The marriage of the Princess Elizabeth of Roumania, daughter of the crown prince, and Prince George of Greece, eldest son of the crown prince and grandson of King George, will Elizabeth inherits the wonderful beauty Mary Garden Succeeded at the and vivacious temperament of her mother, who before her marriage was her royal highness Marie, princess royal of Great Britain.

Among the royalties of Europe she has been considered the most noted beauty. Now the mantle falls upon the shapely shoulders of her daughter, who is only seventeen years old. Our own ex-Empress Eugenie has been called a harmless flirt. At all events, officers who had no other merit than that they danced at the Tuileries and were good looking received promotion at the suggestion of Eugenie But the Crown Princess of Roumania who is one of the most happily married women in the reigning families, has sur passed Eugenie's record and recalled the days of Marie Antoinette.

An "Outrageous Little Flirt." The charming Elizabeth is an outrageous little fiirt, and since her dresses abashed before a sidewise flash of her beautiful eyes. The dashing George of Greece, who is heir-presumptive to the tottering throne of Greece, was enraptured with the charming princess, and the love match fitting in with the political desire to bind the two countries, which have often been at odds, with a close tie, led to the engagement and plans for his marriage with the young princess. He is twenty-one years old. Now the Princess Elizabeth, who has such a little time to have fun, must be becomingly dignified and quit breaking the hearts of handsome guardsmen. By her father's side the Princess Elizabeth is a cousin of William of Germany, and by her mother's side she has the blood of George of England. The latter ritory. Special Cablegram to The Star. PARIS. June 3.-The frequent fateonly with aggravating circumstancesthat befalls the rich American girl who marries a titled foreigner, has overtaken the Countess di San Martino, formerly Florence Croker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Croker of New York, Glencairn, Palm Beach and Paris. Miss Croker's marriage with the Italian nobleman, although a love match. has lasted about four years. So hurried were these young people to be united that they eloped in a motor car from Aix-les-But the idyl was soon shattered, and now the noble count leads a trans-Alpine existence, while the young countess has taken up her abode in the Avenue The aggravating circumstance in the case of the Countess San Martino is that she cannot get a divorce which would be valid in Italy, for the laws of that country admit no divorce. Her case is similar that of the Countess Edith Van Burden de Castelmenardo, who for years has striven vainly to break the bonds which oind her to a Neapolitan nobleman.

Two Girls With the Mother. Count San Martino is the scion of ar ancient Italian house. It was his cousin. another Count San Martino, who entertained recently at a gargantuan feast the mayors of the principal cities of Italy. The Countess San Martino remains in Paris to be near her mother, who lives at the Hotel Majestic. She practically lives with her mother, dining and lunching with her all the time. Her sister, Miss Ethel Croker, also by marriage Mrs. J. Breen, is likewise living at the Hotel Majestic. The latter's Junolike beauty is much admired, and instead of the conventional chaperon she takes a great Dane dog with her when walking in the Bois. Occasionally, when the sisters visit places of vesperal amusement, the countess acts as chaperon. The pathos of the countess' case does not cover Mrs. Breen's, for the latter can get a divorce from the groom she wedded, and is said to have arranged for the same.

Sherard, a nephew of William Wordsworth of the Lake schoo of poets, is the lady's third matrimonia venture. Before her marriage with the lographer of Zola Mrs. Sherard had diburied Capt. Piggott Harvey, high sheriff of Northamptonshire. Originally she was Miss De Belot, coming of old Virgin-

Ian stock.

The booklet which brought about the trouble between these two former literary affinities does not bear the name of Robert H. Sherard, but purports to have been written by Capt. Corey Sylvester. Under this military title Sherard concealed his authorship, but some too candid and too zealous friends informed Mrs. Sherard that her husband was the author of this obnovious book.

The unbecoming circumstances under which it was written and its being a guide book to gayety in the most wicked city of the world were all poured into her ears.

This piece of Parisian literature gave the first shake to the confidence of Mrs. Sherard in her husband. Then his Russian ex-wife, who also lives in Paris, became troublesome. The climax of disappointment came when Sherard was not able to make good his promise that Mrs. Sherard should be raised to the dignity of Lady Harborough Lady Harborough.

Mary Garden Set Back.

Mary Garden has been succeeded at the Grand Opera by a newly arrived Russian named Mme. Kousnezeff. The Russian has recreated "Gwendoline," now given for the first time in ten years. She is to take Garden's place in "Thais." This blow is particularly severe on Mary, who used to say she held the managers of two state-aided theaters in the hollow of her hand.

Carre, manager of the Opera Comique, first revolted against Mary's domination. In this he was encouraged by Mme. Carre, who has a deeprooted dislike for the Aberdeen girl from Chicago. Messager, manager of the Grand Opera, has been influenced by the change of public sentiment against Mary for the way she treated the head of John the Baptist. This did not please the duchesses who go to the Grand Opera Friday nights. The more outspoken of the dov agers said her acting was not fitted for the stately national Academy of Music. Whatever the cause may be, there is a reversion in Paris from what the Parisians call the exaggerated style Mary Garden to the simple manner of Mme. Kousnezeff. The revolt against Mary Garden and the favor of Kousnezeff is led by the Duchess De Luynes, Duchess De Rohen, Countess Chandon de Brielles and Countess de Gabriac.
